HUNGRY Highbrows OF GERMANY FAIL TO STIR MAETERLINCK

Brussels — Maurice Maeterlinck, receiving a request from the Berliner Tagblatt for a message for its Christmas number which is to be printed in the interests of the starving intellectuals of Germany, sent the following reply, a copy of which he gave to the newspaper Le Soir:

"You do not seem to realize that I am a Belgian and that it is impossible for me to forget. How could I fail to remember, among other crimes, the odious manifesto of those intellectuals for whom you today ask my support? When Germany shall have repaired a part of the evil she has wrought, I might, 'But while I do not forgive, for there are some things beyond forgiveness, I at least try to throw a veil, which will always be transparent, over memories which will only fade out with my life.'"

Peace on Earth and the Christmas Spirit.
"Put up again thy sword into its place; for all they that take thy sword shall perish with the sword."
That was a natural thing for the speaker to say. When he was born the rejoicing that came was not because some great soldier, some warrior, some kingly ruler had arrived in the world with a career of blood and conquest ahead, but, "Peace on earth" was the burden of the new song of rejoicing.

If there should be any spirit at all in the Christmas of 1923 it should be that of peace. Not the peace that comes by power and arms and navies and airplane fleets, of gas bombs and bayonets, but the peace that is within the souls of men who earnestly desire it and are willing to make sacrifices for its sake. Not destruction, but saving, was the mission of Jesus, the Christ. He came at a strategic time. There was no such thing as independent thought, there was no learning except for the very few. The world was ruled by the sword, and, strikingly true it has been, that all of the rulers of that time perished by the sword. Kingdoms, empires, dynasties, all fell by the sword and the fire, pillage and rapine and all the hideous accompaniments of war and conquest. Riches were not gained in honor and by thrift. Wealth had the stain of innocent blood. Luxury was the payment by slaves peoples for the privilege of living.

The life of Jesus Christ was the apotheosis of peace. His birth was notice to the ancient forms that a new sun had come over the horizon. But war did not end and horror was still present. Greed dominated, prejudice was a living serpent of the soul, frenzied, fanatical exaltation slaughtered its thousands and ambition slew its millions more.

The world is better today than ever. There are those who dispute this. There were those who disputed the possibility of a world being governed by any one but a divinely anointed ruler. There have always been the dwellers in the deeps of gloom and anticipation of the worst. They have pulled the world backward and instead of seeing the glorious possibilities of the present have harked to the past as evidence of decay and impending destruction. They have sought solace only in the "Wee art thou" and not in the visions of hope. They help to solve no problems but sit with sackcloth and ashes, mourning for a dying world. This Christmas time is no time for these pessimists. This is a day of rejoicing that mankind has climbed up and up the steep, like the Samurai, toward the summit of a Thousand Years where alone is perfection. "Daily with souls that 'rings and plot we sinners climb and know it not."

When Jesus Christ came into this world 1923 years ago, there was no individual existence. Each man, each woman belonged to the state if the state so demanded. It was a world of autocracy. It was a crime to have knowledge. Religion was a matter of meaningless form, a cold and stern and relentless thing, as unyielding as a prison cell, filled with terrors and threats and horrible necessary expiation. Slaughter was argument, murder the answer to intrigue, assassination the one gesture of protest. The individual, sunk into servitude and slavery, was a sordid and stupid thing, a heaver of wood and a drainer of water. Into royal and imperial robes was woven the fabric of human life and human toll unrequited but by the blow of the master.

We have climbed far in those 1923 years. We may not have reached the summit, we may not have finished the course but we are still keeping the faith. There is a greater spirit of human brotherhood. True, there are millions of people still groping for the light, still trying to solve the problems which America solved in great measure two centuries ago. But out of the apparent chaos of racial prejudice, ambition and greed, man shall eventually emerge with all his questions answered. "Put up again thy sword into its place," has not yet been learned by all. It will be in time. There are more than a thousand tribes, nations, races, dialects, languages, ethnological and geographical divisions and lines of demarcation separating peoples. If we had given two years to each for the purpose of reaching all mankind with the story of "And on earth peace, good will toward men," it would require 2,000 years. Hence there need be no despair that we have not come into perfection at the end of the year 1923.

Shorn of its sacerdotal attributes entirely, and as a plan only of life and its living, the birth and being of Jesus Christ, and his teachings consciously or unconsciously, form the greatest scheme for national peace and hopeful existence ever presented to humankind. He uplifted the poor and lowly. He spoke to the widow and orphan and the little children. He led to waste places and fed the hungry. He was no revolutionist. He advocated no destruction of government. He declared no enmity for any man. He loved his neighbor as himself. He was willing to make a sacrifice for his fellows. He said the greatest of all love was that a man should lay down his life for his friend. He advocated acknowledgement and obedience to law. On the setting up of his kingdom there was no blood and no innocent dead at his hands. He was for no church militant. And out of it he presented a peace plan for all the world to follow. "Put up again thy sword." "Love thy neighbor."

In this spirit we can approach Christmas. We

MORE CHILDREN ON THE FARMS
By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.
Washington.—An interesting fact has been dragged out from its hiding place in a maze of census report figures and presented to the American people for consideration. This fact is that the farms, which are responsible for most of the nation's food supply, have the added burden of being a main source of the child surplus.
In other words, while the city family tends to dwindle to proportions that fit a city flat, the farm family continues to fill an entire farmhouse. This contrast has been noted for some years, but statistics on farm population were not tabulated until the last census, and the country has not realized how great a proportion of non-producers the farms were supporting.
To put it into plain figures, if you compare the 30,000,000 of our farm population with an equal amount of city population, you find that the farms have 2,000,000 more children under 10 years than those cities have.

This statement is made by Dr. C. J. Galpin, who is in charge of farm population studies in the Department of Agriculture. To make his figures more vivid, he shows that 2,000,000 is, roughly, about the population of Wales, or Latvia, or of such a state as Oklahoma. If you imagine the task of feeding, clothing, and educating a group of people of this size, you have an idea of the situation. Remember how much money American gave for the stricken war sufferers of the Near East, merely to keep life in them. Then think of the farmers supporting their excess burden of young children and trying to keep up with the rising standard of living.
Children between 10 and 20 years are more numerous on the farms than in the cities in almost the same proportion as those under 10. So altogether the farms have an excess burden of nearly 4,000,000 children, as compared with the same amount of city population.
It is true that the farmer can feed a large family almost as cheaply as a city man can feed a small one. Some other expenses are lower, too, in rural districts. And the child on the farm helps in the work. In its surveys, the United States Children's Bureau finds that farm work is an important form of child labor. As an example:

"In two cotton-growing areas of Texas studied by the Children's Bureau many teachers reported that a third or sometimes half of the children who were supposed to be in school in September or October did not start until at least November. During the harvest time the children picked, hauled, and chopped, and sometimes plowed and harrowed. Nearly every child over 10—girls as well as boys—had worked in the fields."
There is no doubt that farm children are to some extent an asset in years when the city child is reaching but a liability from the point of view of the family finances. Still, even a country child is but a partial producer at most. And the farmer is urged to give his children better education, and as the automobile, telephone, mail order catalogue and radio bring the farm closer to the city, the budget of the farm family becomes more and more like that of any city household.
The joker in the situation is that, at some indefinite point, the farm child is very apt to become the city man or woman. As the census figures are tabulated under such general headings as under 10 years, 10 to 20 years, and over 20 years, it is difficult to estimate at what age the young people desert the farms for the cities. There is no doubt, however, that the farm does raise thousands of children to be producers for the city.

In this connection Dr. Galpin says: "It is a pertinent question to ask, 'What compensation to the farm community does the urban community render for this piece of human service?' What would Minneapolis think of adding the annual expense of 25,000 children to its budget until those children were educated and then handing them over to St. Paul; doing this year after year. There is more to farming than just getting a fair return for crops. There is a big, unsolved mystery of population and institutions hanging about the farm community."

You will note that the doctor says that the mystery is unsolved. He presents the fact that the farms have the heaviest burden of raising children, and he leaves it to others to draw their own conclusions.

His mention of institutions is perhaps a clue to one of the great needs of the farm districts. And the Shonard-Johnson-Hickman act, which is financed jointly by federal and state appropriations, might be mentioned as a specific example of the sort of thing that the nation can do to some extent to assist the farm family. The benefits of this act are being applied especially in rural districts, where hospitals, clinics, nurses, and health instruction are not just around the corner, as they are for the city mother.

In the country, space, sunshine, fresh air, and quiet are free, or at least cheap. In the city they are expensive. A roomy house with a garden, or an apartment with a sunny exposure is handled by the city agent as a priceless treasure. But the city has the advantage of the farm in regard to institutions. Mothers in towns have the benefit of clinics, and the children's health is watched in the public schools.

The advantage of institutions is becoming apparent in the infant mortality rate. Between 1915 and 1921, there was a marked decrease in infant mortality in this country, and the greatest gain was noted in city areas. With greater facilities for care of mothers and children, the rural infant mortality rate could still be much lower than at present. This is demonstrated in New Zealand, where the population is largely rural, and where the number of babies that die is remarkably low.

The government and farm organizations are interested in the development of modern institutions in rural communities, but as such matters must in general be organized, financed locally, progress is slow. Hospitals, welfare centers, libraries, and high schools are regarded as important influences which tend to stabilize, protect, and perpetuate the family.

The farmer and his family have generally lacked these "city advantages" unless they were located near a city, because it has been taken for granted that the farmers could not establish modern institutions. A township, of about 36 square miles, is ordinarily the farmer's local unit, and the population of a township averages between 500 and 600 farm persons. The members of such a group may be individually as well as well able to support institutions as city residents are, but the per-capita expense is too great.

It is now being suggested that the counties, which average 10,000 farm residents each, may be able to organize for development of institutions in farm communities. Another suggestion is that the farmers might join with towns and cities having a population of 10,000 or less to make new units for financing institutions.

can see that it means more than a mere trifle here and there expressing our remembrance. In it all is the philosophy of Little Jean, pleading for a life: "It is not the deeds you do for yourself that makes the pillow soft when you come to die, but the deeds you do for others." In that spirit we may certainly this year "Rejoice and be exceedingly glad."

We wonder if these church schisms and divisions mean that there will be a score or more of new highways laid out to heaven or will some of the old ones be blocked up so they cannot be traveled?

JUST FOLKS
By EDGAR A. GUEST.
A CHRISTMAS GREETING
Take this old wish once more
From one who, day by day,
Finds welcome at your door
And joy in all you say:
As you have dealt with me,
May time so deal with thee.
May every morning smile
On you in passing by,
And light the untrod mile
And make you glad as I
Have always been to see
Your hand held out to me.
Old friend, this little rhyme
Is penned to wish that you
May find this Christmas time
Your wishes fairly true;—
May you and yours rejoice
As I, who hear your voice.
May time unto the end—
And distant that may be—
To you as such a friend
As you have been to me;
God grant this time may do
His kindest for you.

SPUR OF THE MOMENT
By ROY K. MOULTON.
THE MOUTH.
I thought that I was dying.
And visions then arose
Of mother, home and father
And goodness only knows.
And whilst I sat here pondering,
The dentist with a shout
Cried, "Well, it's over, girly,
That blamed old tooth is out."

To think of all the worry
And all the useless wall
I gave before it happened,
But I lived to tell the tale.

WHO'S WHO TODAY
JAMES W. GOOD.
The recent appointment of James W. Good, former congressman, to be associate manager, with William M. Butler, of President Coolidge's campaign, for Republican nomination is taken to mean that Good will be virtually western manager of the campaign.

He is the man who handled the western end of the campaign for the election of Harding and Coolidge four years ago. And it is said his efficient work in that campaign prompted Coolidge to ask him to serve again under the same standard.

Good's home is in Cedar Rapids, Ia., but his business offices are in Chicago, where he is the head of a leading real estate firm. He served five terms in the lower house of congress and before his retirement was chairman of the always important appropriations committee.

He was born in Cedar Rapids, September 24, 1866, and received his education in the schools there and Coe College.

Frank D. Kellogg, the new United States ambassador to Great Britain, booked to sail today to take up his post in London.

Undiscovered by the failure of past tests to establish two-way communication across the Atlantic ocean, the American Radio Relay league today begins another series of transatlantic tests, the fourth to be undertaken.

OMNIPOTENT HELP
The Lord is my deliverer.—2 Samuel 22:2.

Personal Health Service
By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.
Noted Physician and Author
A reader offers the following interesting suggestions concerning sweating feet:
"At different times I have read your recommendations as to the matter of sweating feet and note that you have great faith in formaldehyde as a deodorant. I have used this product for many years with excellent results, but have used a much weaker solution than you advised. The one to eight solution that you suggested burned and blistered my feet, causing them to peel back. I have found that a one to 32 solution is most suitable for my skin.
"My experience tells me that much of this offensive odor comes from the accumulation of acid matter or odors in the lining of the shoes. To remedy this I pour a cupful of the 1-32 solution into the shoe, shake it around for half a minute to thoroughly wet the entire lining, then pour it out into the other shoe and treat likewise, then pour off and set the shoes away to dry for 24 hours. This has proved very effective.
"I advise sprinkling borie acid powder into the shoes. This is a constituent of foot powders, but has never been satisfactory to me. One day in desperation I took the plain talc powder which I use for dusting my face, and applied it liberally to the inside of my shoes and found great relief in all ways. From the nature of talc I know it is not absorbent, deodorant or disinfectant, yet it probably lessened the disagreeable conditions. Possibly the talc diminishes the shoe friction and therefore the amount of heat developed."
Formalin is the name of the standard solution of formaldehyde sold as a disinfectant, deodorant, and as a preservative. Formalin (the official medical name for it is liquor formaldehydi) is a 37 per cent solution of the gas formaldehyde in water, colorless, with a pungent odor in the pure state. It is a caustic. A special polymerized preparation of it known as paraform comes in pastilles which are used in a lamp to generate formaldehyde gas for disinfecting and deodorizing rooms and its contents. The gas penetrates fabrics without injuring them nor destroying their color; it is far less poisonous than some other disinfectants so used.
The strength of the dilution I suggested, one to eight, may be too great for some skins, as I explained at the time, but even stronger solutions are often advantageously used, merely diluted with water. I have used the sporic or painted upon the soles and the spaces between the toes and allowed to dry, once in a week perhaps. In using a formalin solution care should be taken to keep it off the fingers—a brush or a swab of cotton or a stick is handy to apply it with. A one to 32 solution is made by placing about a tablespoonful of the official or standard solution of formaldehyde in a pint bottle and filling it up with water. A tablespoonful in a half pint bottle filled up with water takes a one

Horoscope
MONDAY, DECEMBER 24, 1923.
Christmas Eve this year should be a happy time, indeed, according to astrology. For Mars and Uranus dominate it in benefic aspect and no evil omens are seen.
It is a time when strong emotions and deep affections will be encouraged to come to the surface.
Men should be especially kind and generous while this configuration prevails. There is a special promise of good for all who are engaged in big constructive work or in the professions that relieve human sufferings.
Physicians and surgeons, dentists and philanthropists will still be subject to the fortunate rule of the stars.
Uranus is in an aspect supposed to make the mind alert and sensitive to all that is highest in human thought. While spiritual thoughts and devotion under this planetary government there is also a sign making for benefits for military men and even honors that will come to a general.
All the mental qualities of the finer sort should be kept during the sway of Uranus.
Psychic matters are well directed at this time when there should be an extraordinary power to receive impressions from the unseen world. The clergy should be very active during this direction of the stars which forecasts much charitable work, especially toward the opening of spring.
President Coolidge is subject to planetary influences that promises him the apex of success.
Much extravagance in sumptuous entertaining again will mark Washington, D. C., and this is not a good omen for the prosperity of the country.
Peace should be proved for at this time, it is foretold for there will be reason to fear that the ideal of universal brotherhood is almost lost in future international relations in which the United States must become involved.
Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a happy, successful year in which will come travel and change.

CHAPTER LXVI
When I entered the room in the late afternoon I was met by a very different reception from any which had ever been accorded me before. It began at the station. News travels fast, especially when it concerns people already in the public eye, and in every face I saw, and in every handshake offered me, I read the welcome due to the change in my circumstances made by Edgar's choice of a wife. The Editor, whom they had held in preference above all others as a delightful fellow, as a companion in a thousand and of a nature rich and romantic enough to give up fortune and great prestige for love; but in his new position as Editor of the "Herald," they meant me to realize it.

And I did. But there was one whose judgment I sought—whose judgment I awaited—whom I must see and understand before I could return these amenities with all the grace which they demanded. There was nothing for me in this open and unabashed homage rendered after weeks of dislike and suspicion. If the welcome I should not fail to receive from Orpha's courtship should be shot through with the sorrow of a loss too great for any love of mine to offset.

So I hastened and came to Quenton Court, and entering there found the court abuzz with color and every servant which the house contained drawn up in order to receive me. It was English, but then by birth I am an Englishman and the tribute pleased me. For their faces were no longer darkened by distrust and some even were brightened by liking; and were I to remain master here—

But that was yet to be determined; and when they saw with what an eager glance I searched the gallery for the coming of their youthful mistress, they fled quickly away till I was left alone with the leaping water and the rainbow hues and the countless memories of joy and terror with which the place was comingled. Orpha and a favorite collic which from the first had shown a preference for my company that was sometimes embarrassing, since it gave me an opportunity to whisper many secrets in his ear. As I stood there with my eyes on the gallery, he came running to me with so many excuses I had to turn him away. I was not to take it as an omen that all would be well with me when she who held him dear would greet me in her turn.

The falling drops plashing in their basin behind me was sweet, but I longed for the tones of her voice. Why did she tarry? I had never when I had heard her footfall in the gallery above, and caught the glimpse of her figure, first in our opening of its lattice work and then in another as she advanced towards

TODAY'S RECIPES
Cheese Souffle—Two tablespoons butter, one heaping tablespoon flour, three eggs, one-half cup milk, one cup grated cheese, one-half teaspoon salt, pepper to taste. Put butter in saucepan. When melted add flour and stir until smooth. Add milk and seasonings, cook two minutes, add beaten yolks and cheese. Cook. When cold add well beaten whites. Turn into buttered pudding dish and bake about twenty minutes in a rather quick oven. Serve immediately.
Lemon Sauce—One cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, one egg, beaten light, and juice of one lemon, one-half cup boiling water. Let thicken in basin set in boiling water. This sauce will taste very well if half the butter is used.
Mayonnaise Recipe—One egg, one-half teaspoon dry mustard, one-half teaspoon salt, one lemon, two cups oil, few drops Tarragon vinegar. Place the whole egg in a bowl, put in dry ingredients and add a tablespoon lemon juice. Beat finger egg beater and add a small amount of oil. Beat until the dressing begins to thicken, then add the oil in larger amounts, until two cupsful are used. When finished add remaining lemon juice to taste and also the Tarragon vinegar. If directions are followed the mayonnaise will be very delicious, and will always be a success. Tarragon vinegar is a vinegar which has had a few leaves of tarragon herb added to it. The flavor is somewhat elusive, and gives a professional taste to the mayonnaise.

YOUR BABY and MINE

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Mrs. Eldred is happy to advise all mothers about the care of their children of any age, or on any subject which does not belong in the field of the doctor.

Bottle Feeding
If the baby must be weaned and only the doctor should decide this important question, the "how" of bottle feeding is important. Bottle formulas should be prepared the first thing every morning for the whole day; a bottle and nipple being provided for each feeding and one extra in case of accidents.

The bottles should be rinsed in cold water when emptied and set aside until all but one are emptied, then they should be washed in hot soap suds with a brush, the rinsed, and put on the stove in a pan of cold water. When the water has boiled removed the bottles to be cooled and filled.

Water for the formula should be boiled and cooled before mixing with the milk. If the milk is boiled, it, too, should be cooled before being mixed and put away on ice. Milk or some sugar should be dissolved in some of the boiled water and added to the formula, the amount of water used being subtracted from the total of water.

There should be a glass measuring cup, a funnel for filling the bottles, a large enamel pitcher and spoon for mixing, large pan for boiling bottles and small pan for nipples. These latter should be reversible, be scrubbed with a brush and soap suds, rinsed, and kept in a milk soda solution. Once or twice a week they should be boiled.

Bottle feeding is not a simple matter, but it can be reduced to the fewest possible movements, and on the cleanliness of the process and the care of the milk after it is boiled depends in a large measure the avoidance of all intestinal ailments which come from milk which is handled in an uncleanly manner and allowed to become warm after it has been present, have a chance to develop.

Heart and Home Problems

By ELIZABETH THOMPSON.

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

A COUNTRY GIRL.
Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of nineteen years and live in the country, but I have always lived in town before. I used to have many friends in town, but since I live in the country my friends think that I am a bit of a snob. I think that is very foolish of them. Do you think he is really that jealous of me or is trying to see what I will do?

I have bobbed hair and he does not like it at all. Would you advise me to let it grow?

Since he is so jealous of me should I keep him from coming to my house? Is it wrong for me to invite him to my house?

I kept company with a boy just one year younger than I, but since I don't live in town any longer he has been caused to dislike me by a girl friend of mine. She loved him and so she has caused him and others to hate me.

How should I treat my friends?

LONGSOME KID.
You are a super-sensitive little girl, and doubtless have suffered from loneliness because you have been taken away from the city and no longer live as your friends and they haven't known just how to treat you. Instead of being kind, they have proved themselves to be indifferent and heartless. Since you have found them wanting in the true spirit of friendship, I would advise you to stop thinking of them as friends. Always be pleasant and cordial to them, but look about for new friends. Don't let shyness on your part hold you back. It usually takes a form of aggressiveness to have a lot of friends and be popular. Most people haven't time or inclination to meet others half way. When you meet some one you like in your rural neighborhood or at church, invite her to your home for Sunday afternoon or tea, suggest that you and she attend a movie together when you are in town. If you interest yourself in others they will surely respond and before long you will find yourself far less lonely and well on the road to having a new circle of friends.

Beauty Chats

WHEN YOU'RE A COLD
If you have a bad cold you probably won't want to look beautiful and I doubt whether you would succeed even if you try. However, here are some suggestions that will make you hate less to look at yourself in a mirror. Of course, I am assuming that at the first sign of a cold, you have taken a good laxative, some quinine or other cold-destroying medicine, and at the first opportunity have gone to bed with a soothing hot drink and a hot water bottle. Today's suggestions are for external remedies.

Your lips will probably be feverish and dry and chapped. Get a lipstick of white cream and keep them well rubbed with this during the day. At night, bathe them with warm boracic water. Your complexion will look dry and gray, a lot of the bad color is due to internal causes, which will be cured by the laxative. To overcome the dryness, rub the skin with heavy cold cream, wash off with warm water and use no soap at all.

If the eyes are at all affected, bathe them with warm water, boracic lotion or bathe them with weak tea. If it's boracic lotion use an eye cup and open and shut the eyes in it. If it's tea, make it fresh, pour it off the leaves after two or three minutes, wring out a soft cloth in it, hold it over the closed eyelids, renewing the cloth from time to time.

If the nostrils are inflamed, rub them with warm water, boracic ointment. If it's a cold in the nose, camphor salve rubbed into the nose will soften the skin and help dry up the cold. There are various things to inhale, which may drive the cold away. Most of them contain menthol and are wonderfully helpful in clearing the nasal passages.

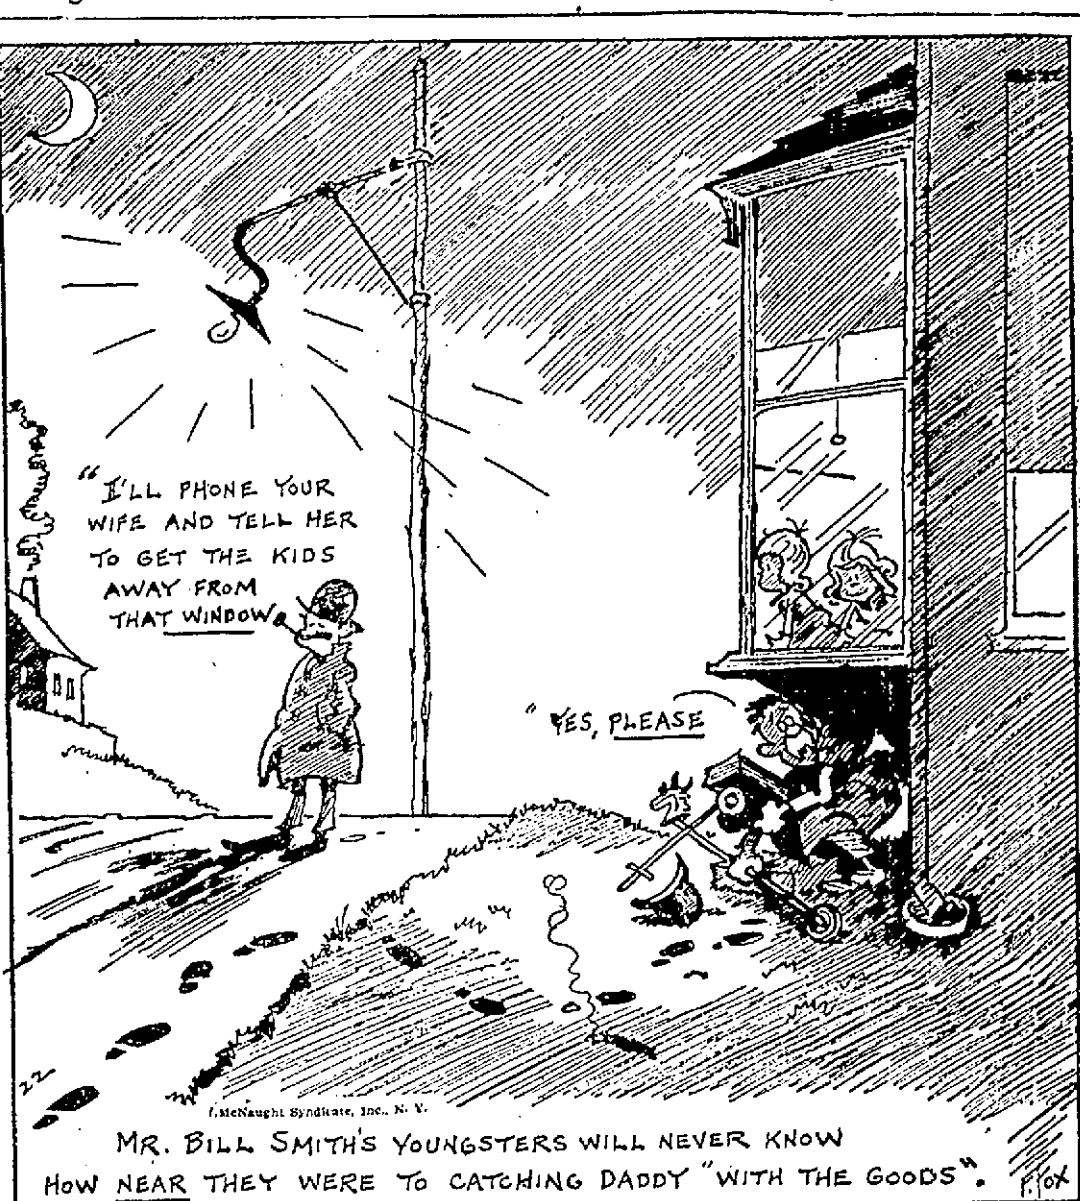

If the skin looks badly in spite of all your efforts, use vanishing cream before powdering. Rub a little oil into the scalp, for the hair looks dry and dusty with a cold.

T. F. D.—Exercise, or massage, since this is also another form of exercise, will always build up the muscular tissue. If there is too much fat, exercise reduces it while it gives firmness to the muscles. If the muscular tissue is flabby there will be a development from the exercise, so exercise will either reduce or increase as the need may be for perfect symmetry and health.

R. N. S.—The only way to cure pimples is to trace them to their cause. The trouble may often be found in the digestive tract, poor circulation, or from a run down system. Eating too much candy, espe-

Stolen By a Sheik

Thrilling Story of Capture and Enforced Marriage by a Bandit of the Desert

By DONNA JUANITA LOPEZ
(Copyright 1923, By the World-Wide News Service, Inc., Boston, Mass.)

For a full minute he gazed at me while I remained with my eyes cast to the ground. I had evidently found favor in his sight, for when he spoke it was with something of a softened voice.

"Girl," he said, "Thou art my slave, purchased by me and belonging to me."

There must have been something pitiful in the look I cast at him as he spoke thus, for he stretched out his right hand for me to hold and then, as I refused, he said: "I am one who fears Allah and obeys the commands of his prophet. Thou art mine to do with as I like, but I listen to the words of the All-Forgiving. It is my purpose to make thee my wife, and as such I give thee thy freedom. Thou art no longer a slave, but free. Go to the women and prepare for the bride, the marriage feast is already commenced."

Haji Ibrahim rose as he spoke and struck me lightly on the cheek, the sign in that tribe of freedom from slavery. I have since learned that when they freed their slaves, calling it manumission. He then dismissed me, sedately, yet kindly, and I returned to the women's quarters.

The news of my freedom and destined honor had preceded me. There were only two women in the harem, waited on by several slaves, and they treated me with a sort of hostile deference. I could understand their feelings.

It was the old story of Zobeidah over again, except that, whereas I had been a passing favorite of Sheikh Derr, now I became the favorite wife of Haji Ibrahim, who, although he ever maintained towards me the attitude of complacent superiority and mastery which all Mohammedans and maid towards their wives, occasionally condescended to converse with me and discuss affairs. He was curious to know my past history, and was surprised to hear how I had fallen into the hands of Sheikh Yusuf.

I was afraid to dwell on much of my life, for my rescuer, who I knew that I emphasized the point too much, Haji Ibrahim might take me yet further into the desert, beyond all hope of return.

The Chief's Lesson

For the next six months or so my life was as pleasant as it ever could be in such circumstances. In my way was a small queen, with slaves to do my bidding and a considerable power in the tribe. I was, in fact, like one of the heroines mentioned. I was married to one of the best types of desert chieftains, a man of really noble spirit and with a fine presence, a sportsman, a hunter, a man of few words, but whose few words seemed to be the real thing. I think there can have been no more unhappy, hopeless girl than Haji sent for me to teach him Spanish. "My forefathers were kings in Spain," he said, "I have a wish to see thee and how my wife and I will take thee to visit thy native land."

How my heart leaped at his words. If only it would really happen so, if once I could set foot in my own country I would be safe and could go and hide myself for ever in the seclusion of some convent, where this dreadful life would be forgotten.

It certainly never occurred to Haji Ibrahim that I could want to leave him. If he considered the subject at all I suppose he imagined me following him in his train, proud of being his favorite wife and of being seen by my own countrymen in that eminent position. To do him justice, he knew as little about Europe as many Europeans, who write glibly about the Moors, know about Morocco and its people.

I taught him Spanish and he made good progress in the language. He got on so well that he determined on a visit to Fez in order to see that city, and travel thence to one of the sea-coast towns, whence he could cross to Spain.

Naturally, I encouraged him in this idea—for I saw the chance of liberty looming greater than ever. I knew there would be foreign consuls at Fez to whom I could fly for refuge. We set out a few weeks later and traveled slowly. I was the only wife accompanying Haji Ibrahim, though I had three women attending me. After some days' journey we reached a place called Ain Char, as I have since learned, about two hundred miles from Fez. It was there that the even tenor of my life with Haji Ibrahim was first upset.

In his dull, preponderant way, he had got fond of me—fonder, in a word, to be employed where Moorish men are concerned. We had settled ourselves for a short halt in Ain Char, and one afternoon Ibrahim came to my tent for his usual lesson in Spanish. He had begun to speak fairly easily, and after a moment he said to me: "Tu estas muy contentaesser mi mujer"—(you are happy to be my wife).

I burst into tears. It was too much to hear this Moor speaking to me thus in my own language. Ibrahim looked at me in amazement, which quickly gave place to displeasure. I tried to pass it off as well as I could, and even smiled with a forced cheerfulness, but Haji Ibrahim was not to be appeased. The frown remained on his face, and after a few moments he rose abruptly and left me alone. So far as I was concerned, the mood soon passed and I felt my normal self. I saw the Haji later, and made believe as though nothing had happened, but my efforts were in vain. He insisted on all my efforts to restore the usual harmony between us.

A Glimmer of Hope

We left soon after and continued our journey towards the great range of mountains which lay between us and Fez. We saw the first of them, a high peak which one of our carriers told me was Job Moussa el Sahlah, towards sunset one day. The carrier said that the next day's journey would bring us to a town called Almis, where no doubt Haji Ibrahim would rest awhile, as it was the resort of many merchants and travelers.

That evening I again tried to escape away the gloomy frown with which Ibrahim viewed me. In vain; at my venturing to address him he turned away, and on my persisting, he ordered me to my tent with more violence than I had ever heard from his lips. He was disappointed, his sense of pride was hurt, and even when I returned to the women's quarters, the national impassiveness of his nature.

Even then I thought little of it. I supposed that his fit of anger, or whatever it was, would wear off, and the matter from my mind and began to think of our near approach to Fez; how I should make my way into the city and what I should tell him. At all costs I was determined to bring no trouble upon Haji Ibrahim's head. Whatever my story, I must divorce from the truth enough to avoid him any further delay.

The next day we reached Almis, a typical Moroccan town of flat roofs and squalid streets, noisy bazaars and silent houses. Contrary to Haji Ibrahim's usual custom, we made our way to a huge caravanserai, where we took up our abode.

My own apartment was a dull and dirty room, consisting of a gallery on the first floor, which ran round the four sides of a large courtyard. The rough floor was carpeted with mats, round, and in the center of the room was a cushioned divan, and in the center were one or two low tables of "mugharabe" work, like a lot of wooden beads threaded on sticks.

The day following our arrival I was sitting in this room willing away the time over a tiny cup of sweet coffee and going over for the thousandth time my projected escape in Fez, when the door was thrown back on its creaking hinges, and Haji Ibrahim appeared. It was unusual to see him at that time of day, and I rose to greet him. His face was impassive. I watched in vain for the gentle look which I had grown accustomed to see in his eyes. He was stern, immobile, indifferent.

Behind him came an old man, a scribe he would seem, from the ink-brown he carried. I gazed at him in amazement, for I had never seen him before, however old, was unkindly of. Even if he perceived my surprise, Haji Ibrahim took no notice. He addressed the old man in slow and measured tones, and I could follow every word he said.

"Muley Abdullah, oh, man of law," he said, "take thou witness that this woman, once my slave, has now my wife and mistress of my harem. He paused and the old man muttered something in assent, and looked at me. What was it all about? Why this solemn declaration? I was lost in astonishment.

"And, furthermore, take thou witness," continued Ibrahim in the same measured tones, "take witness that I am no longer, she is no longer, I renounce her, in the name of Allah and of His holy prophet. I deny her and divorce her. Woman," turning suddenly on me with flashing eyes, "I bought thee, a slave; I gave thee thy freedom; I made thee my honored wife; I demeaned myself by loving thee and seeking to please thee. Now I divorce thee. Let me never see thee more, the door of the harem is open. Go, and never return!"

This amazing ceremony left me dumbfounded. Its brevity bewildered me and, though I was by no means fond of the man who had been my husband, I felt suddenly alone, and deserted.

"What should I do now?" "You can't cast me off like that," I cried. "You haven't the heart to turn me away in this strange place without a friend."

Haji Ibrahim made a gesture of indifference. "Had you still been my slave," he said, after a moment, "my duty would have been to look after you. I freed you from slavery and made you my wife. By the law of the Faithful I have but to say 'I divorce thee' and all claims between us cease."

I had heard enough in the gossip and chatter of the harem to know that he was speaking the truth. I knew enough of Ibrahim to realize that no consideration, least of all any pleading from me, would turn him from his decision. He turned on his heel and left me alone with the lawyer, and perhaps nothing showed me so clearly that I was no longer his wife as that simple act of leaving me with another man.

The Wagon Wheel

Copyright 1923 by Little, Brown and Company, Boston. Serial rights from McClure Newspaper syndicate.

Silo Thompson, ranchman, and his party found a gold mine, and their chances of securing a government contract for their cattle. They agree that the Hawkins ranch is likely to be sold through connivance with crooked Charlie Shale, government agent, but the intent to fight for it. Two unknown cow punchers brand a stony calf with a brand not their own, in order to draw suspicion on the owner of it. Silo Thompson discovers them in the act and they kill him. The punchers decide to throw suspicion on the Hawkins by hiding the dead man's saddle and bridle there.

Pap Hawkins, and his sons, Thom, Hank and Sila, are worried by the idea that there will be an investigation of recent cattle killings and decide to force Dolly Varron, Pap's niece, to fascinate the sheriff, with the idea of turning his inquiries away from the Hawkins ranch. Thom is reluctant because he covets Dolly for himself. Charlie Shale calls on the Hawkinses to discuss prices. Dolly refuses to flirt with the sheriff.

Pap threatens to beat Dolly for refusing to play with the sheriff and Dolly taunts him with "Packing Town Pound." His rage is terrible and he warns her that he will kill her if she speaks of it again. Bill Derr, who has been hired by the Hawkinses to look after their son and brother, Thom, killed, because of his opposition in the matter of Dolly.

He withdrew the shoe from the heel of coals, Cherry-red. He thrust it back in the fire and looked about for the hammer. It was not leaning in its proper place against the anvil, nor was it anywhere in the immediate vicinity.

Then he saw the hammer. It was lying across the shop against the wall, and he strode impatiently to the hammer, stooped to pick it up and overbalanced himself. He fell on his hands on top of the sacks. Somewhere in the back of his mind, he remembered, under the circumstances, was not disposed to leave anything open to conjecture if he could help it, tossed the sack to one side and discovered a horsehair bridle. He lifted it. The bit rings and rein chains clinked. The bridle was the child of Silo Thompson.

A long moment he stared at it. Then he put it where he had found it and replaced the sacks very carefully.

"Have some more coffee?" Pap urged hospitably.

Derr refused, pushed back his chair and took out the makings. Thom removed the coffee pot from the stove and went to the door to throw out the grounds. Dolly, standing at the stove, was stirring the contents of a saucepan.

"Don't often see you in this part of the country," remarked Pap Hawkins, thrusting a splinter of light wood into the stove.

"I have business up here sometimes," said Derr.

"You'd think there'd be enough business down around Seymour to keep a man busy." Thus Pap, bullying right along.

Derr looked back in his chair, which brought Sila and Hank within range of his vision. With Pap getting personal like this, it was just as well to have an eye on every member of the family. Men too, for that matter. It was to be observed that Derr continued to roll his cigarette. This enabled him to keep his finger close to his lips, and of his vest beneath which a six-gun was hidden.

Judge a Car By Its Re-Sale Value

A car that is noted for its used car value, is simply a car that is so well built that it gives good service, with little wear, over a long period of years.

That is the kind of car that sound economy counsels you to buy—and that is the kind of car the new Hupmobile is.

Ever since the first Hupmobile, built 15 years ago, Hupmobiles have been noted for their ability to keep on going, year after year, with a minimum of repair and replacement. Their re-sale value has always been unusually high.

It is good to know that in the new Hupmobile the things which make for long life have been still further improved and strengthened.

When you learn that a car's re-sale value is unusually high, you can be sure that it is also an unusually reliable, low cost car to maintain.

The very features which make for long life to an equal extent make for consistent service.

The new Hupmobile is the finest Hupmobile ever produced. It is built of the best materials, and with the best workmanship.

The motor is still more powerful, still smoother, still more remarkable in its ability to climb steep hills or settle down to a snail's pace without shifting of gears.

Come in and see this more beautiful, larger, easier riding car. Let us demonstrate its brilliant performance for 15 minutes,—and you will agree with us that it gives you all the practical advantages of cars much higher in price.

Local Store Loses on Fake Commission Check from Imaginary Firm.

Swindlers, especially check forgers, are constantly on the alert to keep just one step ahead of their victims by working out new schemes and tricks to outwit the unwary. In this case, nothing without exciting the suspicions of those who "bite."

Particularly in the cashing of bogus checks, the forger's ingenuity and guile and the latest in this line of operations came to light in Janeville Friday, when a local store had a check for $51.12 returned from the bank. The check was from the Citizens' Savings City, Ind., marked "No account." Accompanying the returned check was a letter from the bank in which it was stated that the check was not supposed to have drawn the check not only had no account in the bank but had never existed.

The check, which has been turned over to local police, purported to be a commission check from the Allen Bros. Nursery, Michigan, payable to one of its "salesmen," C. A. Wales. It was dated Jan. 10, 1935, and was for "exchange," National bank and in the upper left hand corner appeared the line, "Commission on sale No. 17,689."

After further thought of removing all doubt as to the validity of the check, appears the printed safeguard against check-raising — "Not over $100." The check is signed by James Allen, president of the nursery.

The name Allen Bros. Nursery is printed in one corner of the paper.

In making a small purchase in Janeville, C. A. Wales cashed the check and presented it for payment.

receiving the balance remaining after the purchase, in cash. This was on Dec. 1. It may be that other Janesville stores were visited by this man at that time but the police have not yet been informed of it.

Money is earned too hard to be swindled out of it

Vendors of "blue-sky" stock not only make personal calls and use the telephone, but they flood the mails with their alluring, get-rich-quick appeals. Frequently they can make a clean-up in a district before Uncle Sam is aware of their crooked work. By the time a fraud order is issued, to stop their use of the mails, the money is lost.

These "come on" letters as they are termed, all tell of wonderful opportunities to make a fortune through a small investment. The large profits made by original investors, in what are now large companies, are cited as a lure for your dollars. A return post card is enclosed. It's mailing brings a salesman, post haste.

Legitimate investment brokers also use the mails to give information about perfectly sound securities. It is sometimes difficult to tell one from the other. Therefore, if you are interested in any of these offers, it is a safe plan to always

Money Rates

Conditions in the money market have not changed during the last year. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York has maintained a liberal Reserve Banks are practically stationary, as also are loans and discounts and deposits of reporting members.

This issue is to provide for the redemption of $250,000,000 of certificates of indebtedness payable December 15 and for interest on the public debt on that date, amounting to about $75,000,000. On January 1, 1924, about $50,000,000 of War Savings certificates of the series of 1919 were exchanged for the new issues of the treasury that part of these will be exchanged for the new treasury savings certificates. It is stated that the new series of the treasury issues before March 15, 1924.

Prominent Standard Oil officials are said to be "bullish" on oil stocks for the first time since the big slump started last spring. The large advances yesterday in some of the oil stocks were attributed to this attitude. It is understood that Prairie Oil and Gas company has accumulated 30 million barrels of crude oil. Sinclair and Standard Oil of Indiana together have 49 million barrels, and the latter company has 10 million barrels. These three holdings constitute 45 per cent of all the crude oil in tank storage. It is believed by oil men that this and other accumulations of cheap crude oil will be marketed at large profit when prices rise. Some oil men prominent in the oil industry are planning an export oil company such as is operated jointly in the steel and copper trades to handle surplus stocks.

California's total production of crude oil in November was 22,397,848 barrels; a year ago, 14,036,000 barrels. Stocks at the end of that month were 89,003,345 barrels, an increase in October of 653,975 barrels. A year ago stocks were 48,850,000 barrels. In November 111 wells were completed with initial daily production of 99,797 barrels.

The undertone of the bond market is firmer, although considering the list as a whole the price advance has been slight. The only important gain was in second-grade rails. Transactions were in fair volume throughout the period. New offerings were moderate in amount and were absorbed promptly.

On December 10 the secretary of the treasury offered $300,000,000 United States Treasury certificates of indebtedness, one series maturing in six months, with interest at four per-

New York—Steel buying, generally speaking, is lagging, and will probably not pick up until the second half of the year, by which time inventories will have been taken and production for the year will be known.

Underlying conditions are very sound and prices are the most stable in years. Demand for steel is strong as well as finished products. The industry in general is operating at 70 to 75% capacity.

Chicago concern is climbing. Last week's report of a closing of two mills. The largest steel order of last week was that of the Atchafalaya, Togo, for 10,000 tons of 12" x 12" steel rails. This carrier will still buy 25,000 tons of track necessities.

Steel consumers are trying persistently to bring down steel prices, but so far they have failed. Steel makers claim that costs do not war-

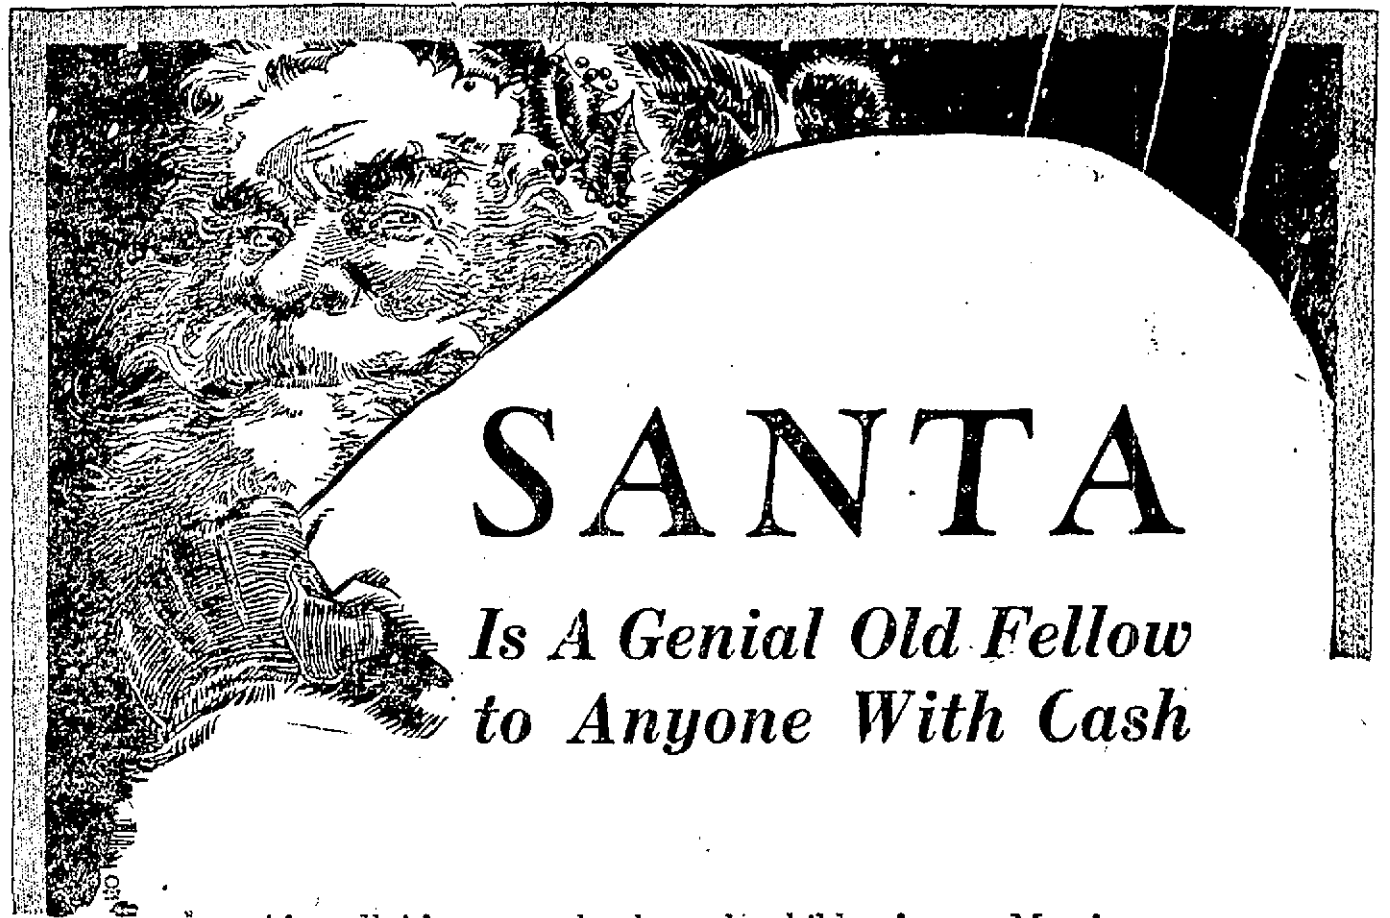

Substantial advances in the market price of the stock of New York banks and trust companies have occurred recently, and are accounted for by the large increases made this year in surplus and undivided profits. The Chase National bank now has surplus and undivided profits of 216 per cent of its capital stock; National City, 151 per cent; Mechanics and Metals, 168 per cent; Park National, 240 per cent; Chemical, 367 per cent; Hanover, 483 per cent.

Secretary Mellon declares recent developments bear out his forecast of favorable business conditions. He expects quick recovery after the usual post-holiday inventory shutdown.

October aggregate net operating income of 179 railroads and fifteen switching and terminal companies was $102,933,691, compared with $85,137,051 in October, 1922. For ten months this year net income was $821,550,739 compared with $614,620,469 last year.

DROWN DEPRESSION

Wisconsin Produces 200 Million Dollars Worth of Dairy Products.

Wisconsin dairy products of 1932 had a total value of over $200,000,000, including all types of dairy materials, facing the state above other states in the nation in this respect, according to the annual report for 1932 of the State Food and Dairy Commissioner J. Q. Emery, which has just come out of the press and was made public today.

Some of the interesting items in the report follow:

"There were 238,735,569 pounds of cheese produced in factories, other than cottage, skim milk, primost, cooked, butter milk and cream cheese valued at $53,007,848.00. There were 4,936,363 pounds of cottage, skim milk, primost, cooked, butter milk and cream cheese produced, valued at $21,884.10, and 308,117 pounds of farm made butter valued at $4,733.50.

"Upon the generally accepted theory that quality in commercial butter determines its price, the quality of Wisconsin butter, obtained from all the states bordering on Wisconsin and the average of the entire United States as shown by records of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

"There were 423,100,000 pounds of condensed products, consisting of evaporated, condensed, powdered and concentrated milk and evaporated cream, valued at $34,367,537.50, and 13,929,094 pounds of evaporated, condensed, powdered and concentrated skim milk and compounds, valued at $852,502.14.

"The value of milk used in the manufacture of malted milk, and other similar products was $580,967.35.

"There were 5,950,556 gallons of ice cream produced, valued at $6,166,325.64.

"It is estimated that there were 960,621,235 plants of milk produced, used for family consumption, other than that furnished cheese factories, butter factories, condenseries and ice cream plants, valued at $28,818,637.05.

"Close inspections of all cheese and butter factories and creameries, made during the past year, by the county inspectors, showed 3,269 inspections of cheese factories, 2,200 inspections of butter factories, 50 inspections of ice cream plants, 170 inspections of city and village milk supplies, 1,327 inspections of farm dairies and responded to numerous calls for inspection and instruction of relative to the care of milk and milk products, which no records were made the report declares.

"HENNERY"

1. A certain man had a flock of thoroughbreds and an over-sized hen. And he had a hen who was a complacency and commended with himself thus:

2. Behold, they are fair, withal, and they are mine. Now will I add to my flock. All my purse, even to overflowing, for there is none can stand against me.

3. And he did even as he said and did sell many eggs for his hens.

4. But when did the purchasers descend upon him with many maledictions. Yea, they fell on his neck and cursed mightily, saying:

5. "You shrewdly hast thou deceived us." Have we not paid into thy treasury much gold for hatching eggs, and behold, what have we to show? A few scrubby cockles for the rest and many pessimistic pullets. Go to!

6. And it came to pass in the coming season that his neighbor came unto him and said, Behold, I see unto you a city to attend the show. Come then with me.

7. And the man laughed him to scorn, saying, Wherefore? Have I not chickens such as are not anywhere else in my county?

8. But the neighbor prevailed upon him and he did go, even unto the showman. And there his eyes were opened and he did receive the joy of the country.

9. For his own flock at home did appear like unto a cipher without a rim and his importance did shrink even as the cake to which leaveneth on the back of the hen.

10. And his former words did recur to him like the kick of a double-barreled Missouri mule and his feeling was like to a pair of copper farthings in a jewelry store before Christmas.

11. And he gazed upon the beautiful streaks of blooded birds, even in the pink of condition, and recalled his scraggly flock.

12. And he did devour with his eyes the clean-cut, long-bodied pullets and chickens, and sheepishness did begin its perfect work within his soul.

13. And he returned to his home a humble man, consumed with a brand new desire to learn.

14. For he had seen that which every lover of poultry should see at least once every season.

15. Seek, then, the best show in thy territory and in reach of thy pocketbook and get there.

TO SEEK MEMBERS
FOR JUNIOR CLUBS

Canvass Rural Schools in All Townships Week of January 7, 1934.

The drive for junior club membership in stock county will be made soon after Jan. 7, 1934, applications to be received in the rural schools of the county. This was decided during the meeting of the junior club advisory committee held in the court house this week.

It is hoped to secure at least 1,000 boys and girls to engage in one or more of the seven club projects to be undertaken during 1934.

Preliminary plans for a county club round-up picnic were made during the meeting. A program will be given for the juniors and attention paid to recreational features of club work.

The drive for junior club membership will be set early in June. All club members in the dairy calf division will be urged to bring back their calves for competition in the yearling division of the fair this year.

Changes and modifications in the rules will be made by J. E. Jackson, chairman of the county committee, and W. J. Bouzant, chairman of the rules committee.

The county was divided by townships and men selected to visit the 143 schools of the 29 townships in the county. Applications will be distributed at the schools. All records will be centralized to be handled by Jack C. Nisbet, secretary of the county club committee. New record books will be distributed to junior club members.

It is expected that the drive will be successful in carrying on projects and the books will hereafter be kept in the county, except as the state club authorities desire them to check, and then be returned.

As County Agent R. T. Glascock refused to take charge of the new poultry club, the committee has selected a new leader for this year's project. Premiums for this club will be offered at the fair.

Pioneer Shown Hyde was named as a women's representative for the committee. Frank Schumacher, Robert C. M. Pelland as club supervisor for Center township, and Arthur Tollefson being named supervisor for Spring Valley township.

Foundations were laid for a greater junior club year in 1934 for Rock county. Added interest is evident among the bankers and business interests of the city.

CANNOT DISSOLVE A UNION HIGH SCHOOL WITHOUT CONSENT

Madison—A motion picture which school cannot validly be dissolved at a meeting called for 2 o'clock in the afternoon unless it is clear that the result of such an election would not have been different had the meeting been called at the time provided by statutes. Such a district also cannot be legally dissolved by a vote of the electors without the consent of the board of education. If the district is indebted to the state on a loan from the state, the ruling declared.

TRIAL JUDGE MUST IMPOSE SENTENCE

Madison—A trial judge has no power to fine a defendant for a second offense without imposing any imprisonment in civil cases, the attorney general's department today in a letter to the state district attorney at Madison.

The opinion, written by Assistant Attorney General Messerschmidt, declared:

"A trial judge has no power to fine a defendant for a second offense without imposing any imprisonment, if in his judgment, the offense is not sufficiently aggravated to require a jail sentence, under Sec. 1543, subsection 2."

PROMINENT ASHLAND RESIDENT IS DEAD

Ashtland—John E. Canovan, for more than 40 years a resident of Ashtland and prominently identified with its political life, died yesterday. He is survived by a daughter, and a sister residing in New York state.

Orton Day, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Day, Brookfield, ranks 4, is the town club champion of Rock county.

The award of the first prize and the Gazette championship cup was made after a detailed investigation by J. E. Ainsworth, county club advisor.

His Golden Glow corn yielded 33.375 bushels to the acre, grown on sandy loam. His corn was planted May 15, with fire dried seed, and the total weight of the corn harvested amounted to 7,470 pounds. The total cost figured for the acre, including labor, rent of land, machinery and loss of fertility, amounted to $27.25.

The total net profit was figured at $115.78, a net profit of $88.50.

The winner's story in his record book follows:

"I joined the corn club because of the many valuable suggestions one can give and receive. I chose my acre in the southwest corner of the farm, the same acre as last year. I planted the seed which had sowed 'The Ball Method' was the one used for testing the seed.

"Some of the troubles of a corn grower are storms, drought, insects, and poor soil. Some of the practical points I have learned are to fall or early spring plow, fertilize well, disk, and keep the land free from weeds, plan with the view of raising 100 or more bushels to the acre. The only way one may win the contest is to raise the best corn, and take a thorough interest in all the club activities."

JOHN'S DISEASE
CAUSING LOSS TO CATTLE BREEDERS

Madison—The slow and insidious cattle disease known as John's disease is gradually spreading not only in Wisconsin but throughout the United States as well, according to Dr. R. A. Beach of the Wisconsin experimental station.

Dr. Beach has noted 300 head of cattle in 16 different herds in the state but has found only seven, he declares. From material sent into the laboratory he has diagnosed eight cases of John's disease have been discovered. Beach says.

As the traffic in purebred cattle increases it is obvious, Beach feels, that the disease will spread and afford to completely ignore this malady. Its progress is slow and the insidious nature does not alarm stock owners as would be the case with a more acute disease.

OH! BARRON COUNTY WHO WON SWEEPSTAKE?

Barron—Despite all reports to the contrary Barron county has not and does not expect to choose the modest little violet as its county flower. Instead it is proposed to use the trumpet if necessary to tell the world some of the outstanding facts concerning this rapidly developing agricultural community.

It has 44 cheese factories which in a single year produced $535,000 worth of cheese. Its finest cheese valued at $1,500,000.

It has 20 creameries which produced 5,500,000 pounds of butter valued at $2,300,000.

It produces and exports products in the shape of ice cream, skim milk, butter milk, flour and others valued at $1,000,000.

Valuation of Barron county dairy products for one year is $6,000,000.

It would take 18 trains of 37 cars each to carry these products to market.

Barron county is the home of the world's largest co-operative creamery.

Several of state's leading pea canneries are located in Barron county. Fully 6,500 acres were planted to peas and more than 1,000,000 cases were packed in the county.

Barron county claims to have more standard bred poultry than any other county in Wisconsin, the first county in the world to have a cent free of bovine tuberculosis.

BUMPER CROPS
REPORTED IN U. S.

Larger Yields and Increased Value on Farm Crops Reported by Department.

Washington—Increases in previous estimates for the corn and wheat crops of the country, with indicated larger yields per acre and somewhat better prices, with a larger aggregate value for all crops, featured the December (1932) "final" report of the department, recently given out.

Value of this year's crops was placed at $8,322,605,000, as compared with $7,444,804,000 for last year. The values were based on the farm price of the crops on Dec. 1.

Corn, according to the government report, is the nation's most valuable crop, with a total value of $2,222,013,000. Cotton ranks second, with an aggregate value of $1,738,835,000.

The value of the lint being $1,562,347,000 and of cottonseed $205,538,000. Hay was the only other crop whose value exceeded a billion dollars, its total being $1,324,887,000.

POULTRY SHOWS TO BE HELD IN STATE

Madison—Wisconsin's poultry industry is surely dressing in its display windows, says J. E. Hayes, poultry specialist of the college of agriculture, in commenting upon the shows this winter.

"The quality is excellent. In fact I have never seen better Reds, Rocks, White Leghorns and White Wyandottes. With but one exception every show so far has had more entries than the year before. In the history of that particular district.

"More and more farmers are becoming interested in showing their birds. It is a real profit in a good farm flock and are seeking to replace the few scavengers which they had with a good bunch of 'ex' producers. The birds are showing in the history of all these shows," Hayes declared.

Shows will be held Dec. 26 to 29 at Beloit, Dec. 27 to 30 at Fort Atkinson, Dec. 28 to 31 at Menasha, Jan. 1 to 11 at Albany, Jan. 8 to 11 at Ripon, Jan. 8 to 13 at Jefferson, Jan. 9 to 13 at Sheboygan, Jan. 17 to 20 at Oshkosh, Jan. 22 to 25 at Waukesha, and Jan. 23 to 27 at Appleton.

Kansas City Star Owner Gives Practical Demonstration on Value of P. B. Sire.

Madison—Newspaper editors and publishers who interest themselves in agriculture, have just been accorded high praise by James Fuller, of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

The occasion for the broad endorsement was the sale on the Kansas City market, at top prices, of the season's crop of Sni-Bar demonstration beaver known widely for their merit. In the order of full sale, again afforded an outstanding example of an editor's vision in promoting agricultural progress.

According to animal husbandman in this and other states the movement to eliminate the waste of the scrub sire from the livestock industry annually receives great stimulus from the demonstrations afforded by the Sni-Bar farm management.

This great breeding establishment, comprising a 1,775-acre bluegrass farm, was started in 1913 by W. R. Nelson, founder and editor of The Kansas City Star. In beginning his year program Nelson sought to provide a demonstration of what could be done in improving native cattle by using purebred bulls.

In the terms of his will there was provided in Sni-Bar township in Jackson county, Mo., a herd of 30 yearling purebred bulls, and 30 yearling purebred cows, and

SCENES FROM MEXICO'S LATEST REVOLUTION

Mexican troops snapped in two villages on their march toward Mexico City.

President Obregon of Mexico, has taken personal charge of the government troops called to the colors to stop the advance of rebel troops, under the leadership of Adolfo de la Huerta and his generals, toward the Mexican capital. Obregon fully realizes the fate that has befallen his predecessors in office. It has become a common saying in the revolt-torn country: "No living ex-presidents." Carranza, Madero and Huerta, brother of the rebel leader, were killed.

SUN-TATTOOING FIRST AID TO CUPID FAIR BATHERS AT MIAMI START FAD

The latest fad among the fair bathers at Miami, Fla., is sun-tattooing. With the aid of a simple process, bathers can "tan" their initials or those of their sweet-hearts on their shoulders, arms or limbs. What makes the fad more popular is that the tattooing lasts but a few days.

It has been suggested that hubbies propose to their wives, however, that they tattoo a ball and chain around their necks as indicative of their marital state.

The photo shows two water nymphs there decorated with sun-kissed initials.

WHO'S THE AMERICAN PRINCE CHARMING LLOYD-GEORGE'S DAUGHTER MET HERE?

Miss Megan Lloyd-George.

Somewhere in America a heart is fluttering—fluttering because of Miss Megan Lloyd-George, daughter of the former premier of Great Britain. Miss Lloyd-George shyly admits that she left behind her when she departed after her recent trip to America a young man she found "completely charming." But she can't be inveigled into saying who or where.

George II and Elizabeth, exiled king and queen of Greece.

Admiral Coundouriotis.

The tenth ruler to be driven from his throne since the beginning of the World war is now in exile in Roumania with his queen. King George II and Queen Elizabeth have left Greece perhaps never to return. George is a little better off than some of his deposed royal cousins; he took with him 1,000,000 drachmas and the knowledge that he is on the Greek civil list with a pension of 1,500,000 drachmas. (A drachma is normally worth about 19 cents.)

King George has not formally abdicated, but it is unlikely that he will ever reign again, even if the monarchy is restored. A new king would be elected if the present chaos fails to end in the formation of a republic.

The tides of unrest which have three times in 10 years swept a ruler from the throne of Greece this time left Admiral Coundouriotis, former minister of marine, in power as regent.

MOTORISTS

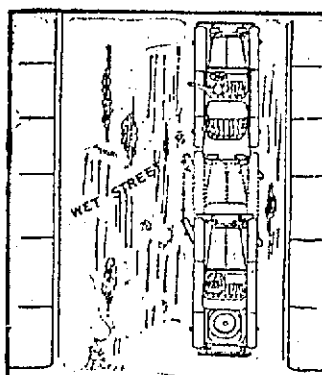

Skidding and How to Prevent It

A good driver rarely allows his car to skid, for skidding is mostly caused by poor driving. Skids generally start because you do one of two things you SHOULD NOT do on a slippery road—apply the brakes harshly, or suddenly twist the steering wheel.

When you apply the brakes harshly on a slippery road, you are liable to start a REAR WHEEL skid. If you twist the steering wheel suddenly, you may start what is still worse, a FRONT WHEEL skid.

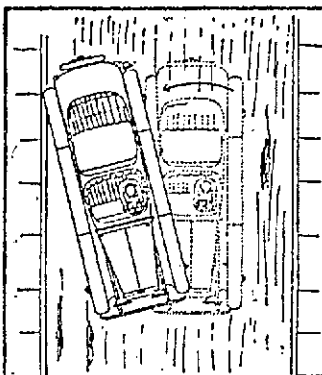

Suppose you are on a slippery road and the car in front of you starts to slow up. To avoid it, you quickly turn the steering wheel, but to your amazement, your car keeps on going straight ahead and does not answer the steering wheel, then you know you are enjoying (sic) A FRONT WHEEL SKID.

FRONT WHEEL SKID CAR WILL NOT ANSWER STEERING WHEEL BUT KEEPS ON STRAIGHT AHEAD TO CORRECT—GIVE THE FOOT BRAKE SHARP DABS IN AND OUT.

A rear wheel skid is a much more common occurrence than a front wheel skid, but fortunately is much easier to correct.

When your car starts a rear wheel skid, take your foot off the brakes at once, and also take your foot off the accelerator (but do not close the throttle completely, as this would have the same effect as applying the brake. Leave the clutch engaged and turn the front wheels IN THE DIRECTION YOU ARE SKIDDING, at the same time giving the brake pedal gentle jabs.

A REAR WHEEL SKID—TO CORRECT NEARLY CLOSE THROTTLE, GENTLY DAB FOOT BRAKE, AND STEER IN SAME DIRECTION AS YOU ARE SKIDDING.

To test the brake adjustment, jack up both rear wheels and securely check up the front wheels. Now get into the driving seat, start the engine, push out the clutch and engage high speed gear, then let the clutch in and speed up the engine to about the same speed it would be revolving on the road at about 15 miles an hour. Now have someone watch the rear wheels while you push out the clutch and apply the brake. If the adjustment is correct, both wheels will stop as soon as the brake is applied. If one wheel continues to revolve after the other stops, then tighten up the adjustment on the pull rod, until both wheels stop when the brake is applied. After completing the adjustment, make sure that both wheels revolve freely when the brake is off.

If this test shows that the brakes are equally adjusted, and a road test shows that you can pull up the car within 40 feet when you are travelling at 20 miles an hour, you know that your brakes are all right.

The best way to prevent rear wheel skids, is to use non-skid chains. Just a little advice about these chains. Don't wire them in place to prevent them creeping round the tire. Leave them loose, so that the cross chains will not stay at the same place all the time. This will distribute what little wear is caused all round the tire.

The harbor of contentment,

HOME—That is the word he speaks as he comes back from work at night. Who is he? He is the man who owns his HOME. It may be but a cottage; it may be almost hidden 'neath shrubs, vines and flowers; but it is his, every inch of it, every spear of its grass, every stick of its timber is his—all his.

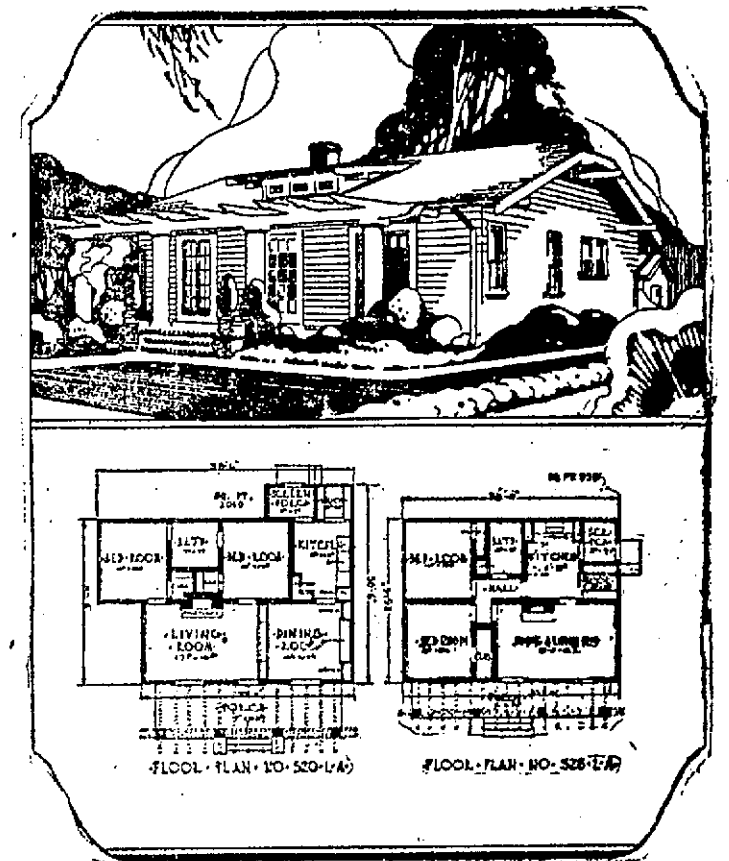

MY HOME—The man who says that may speak no menace consciously; but in the love and affection of those words is the sternest menace to which this world ever listens; for the man who speaks them is ready to stand on that threshold and pay with the last drop of his blood for the possession of those few feet of ground and all that they contain.

TO THE MAN who can say: "THAT'S MY HOME," there is a world of pride, self-respect, stability, devotion, consideration, love and contentment; his home life is likened to that of the ship anchored in the still waters of the protected bay—free from the dangers of adversities—protected by all the laws of nature.

MY HOME—Can you see the world of affection and emotion which plays around that expression? That man will be a respected and substantial citizen. He will weigh all questions carefully from the focus of that little home. He will be happy in the fulfillment of life's greatest achievement—The Ownership of a Home—which means permanency in which his loved ones will be surrounded with ideal environments. That man will be no Bolshevik, no insurrecto, no flaming radical, because he is living in The Harbor of Contentment.

HOME—What a wonderful word. What a great, big, worth-while feeling its ownership gives. How easy to be acquired by those who are really determined.

BE A HOME OWNER—You are entitled to the protection and possession of one, and once the start is made you will wonder why it was not undertaken long ago. Any of the supporters of this page will co-operate with you and the Home Building Editor will gladly give any information you may care to receive.
